BOMB PLOT ARREST

VIRGINIA MAN CHARGED WITH ATTEMPTING TO FACILITATE D.C. METRORAIL ATTACK

CNN

A Virginia man was arrested Wednesday for allegedly attempting to help others he thought were members of al-Qaida in planning multiple bombings at Metrorail stations in the Washington, D.C., area, the Department of Justice said.

Farooque Ahmed, 34, appeared briefly Wednesday before federal Magistrate John Anderson at the U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Va. The court will appoint an attorney for Ahmed, and he was ordered to remain in custody until a detention hearing Friday, said Peter Carr, a spokesman for the U.S. attorney's office in Alexandria.

A federal grand jury returned a three-count indictment against Ahmed on Tuesday, the Justice Department said in a statement.

"In announcing this arrest, officials emphasized that at no time was the public in danger during this investigation and that the FBI was aware of Ahmed's activities from before the alleged attempt began and closely monitored his activities until his arrest," the statement said. "The public should be assured that there was no threat against Metrorail or the general public in the Washington, D.C., area."

Metrorail is the name of the subway system that serves the greater Washington area, including suburbs in northern Virginia and south-central Maryland.

Ahmed is charged with attempting to provide material support to a designated terrorist organization, collecting information to assist in planning a terrorist attack on a transit facility and attempting to provide material support "to help carry out multiple bombings to cause mass casualties" at the Washington-area stations, authorities said. If convicted, he faces a maximum sentence of 50 years in prison.

An administration official said Wednesday

A police officer watches Metro trains arrive Wednesday in Washington, D.C. that Ahmed has no known connections to any overseas terrorist groups or individuals. The investigation is continuing, the official said on condition of not being identified.

White House press secretary Robert Gibbs told reporters the arrest is "another important example" of work by the FBI, all levels of law enforcement and the national security team "to keep our country safe."

"At no point was the public in any danger,"

Gibbs said.

In a statement, the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority said, "This arrest reinforces the need for continued vigilance by Metro and its customers."

Carr said Ahmed was dressed in casual clothes and had a long beard at the court appearance, where he appeared reserved and "addressed the judge respectfully."

Ahmed was arrested at 9:40 a.m. Wednesday at a hotel in Herndon, Va., Carr said.

Ahmed attempted to assist others "whom he believed to be members of al-Qaida" from April through Monday in planning multiple bombings at the stations, according to the indictment.

Federal authorities declined to provide further information on the identities of the purported al-Qaida members who allegedly were in contact with Ahmed.

Purported bin Laden tape threatens French troops

CNN

A man purporting to be Osama bin Laden warned France to get its troops out of Afghanistan and not to oppress Muslims at home in a tape broadcast by the Al-Jazeera network Wednesday.

"If you want to oppress us and thought that it was your right to ban the free women to wear the burqa, isn't it our right to expel your occupying forces, your men from our lands?" the speaker demands, in reference to recently passed French legislation barring women from covering their faces in public.

"The only way to safeguard your nation and maintain your security is to withdraw your forces from Bush's despicable war," the speaker says, an apparent reference to Afghanistan.

The tape is audio only. The speaker does not appear. CNN was not immediately able to confirm that it is bin Laden, the head of al-Qaida.

"To the French people, I say that the formula is simple and clear: As you kill, you will be killed; as you imprison us, you will be imprisoned; as you threaten our security, we will threaten yours, and the one who started the oppression is the one to be blamed," he says.

France has 3,750 troops in Afghanistan, according to NATO's International Security Assistance Force.

French lawmakers approved a ban on full-face veils in September, citing security concerns and saying they violated women's human rights. The ban is scheduled to come into effect in the spring.

Hey cold, this cough's for you

I come in praise of the common cold.

I've been fighting one all week and, honestly, it's been nothing but a pleasure.

Every symptom has arrived right on schedule, been on top of its game, stayed its allotted time and then made way for the next stage.

Oh, hey there, morning sore throat. You're so adorable in your attempt to make me suffer. I trust your little pal runny nose is on its merry way!

What's more comforting in its predictability than the progression of a cold? Scratchy throat into sneeze into unlimited supply of mucous into relentless hacking into phlegm into lingering cough into newspaper column?

In a world in which the super bug from India promises imminent death to all, the common cold is downright retro. They should sell ironic colds at Urban Outfitters.

As soon as I knew my cold was upon me, I took appropriate action and rushed to the doctor so he could prescribe me ... a box of tissues.

If the common cold has any downside, it's the first day you have it. You have to reschedule your week's plans, cancel all your credit cards ...

And you have to show up at work—to establish your cold's legitimacy in the eyes of co-workers and to do your part to maintain the train as an enclosed chamber of germs.

But if you get four or more "you sound awful" comments at the office, you're home that day by 3:45 at the latest. Then the fun starts.

And nothing is more fun, at least at age 36 with two kids, than a couple of days spent on the couch alone and being semi-miserable.

The most benign of illnesses, the common cold is, ironically, the most legitimate reason to stay home from work. You can't prove you have a migraine or that your sciatica is flaring up, but you wear your common cold all over your face. And nobody in your office wants to be around that face.

Of course, they should want to be. If I ran my office, there'd be a raffle whenever anyone had a cold. The winner would get to nuzzle with the person with the cold in hopes he or she would catch it. If handled correctly, there would be an ongoing, fairly distributed common-cold rotation.

Perhaps my affection for the cold has to do with age. Wait, this is it? Just the common cold? Are you sure you're not going throw a kidney stone or a hernia my way, too? Well, OK, I guess I owe you one.

If I have one regret, it's that I didn't savor the colds of my youth. In between my hacking, I plan on instilling that value in my sons—and nuzzling with them real tight tonight.

MOMENT-ISH OCCASION

Stewart-Colbert rally promises big turnout—but does it really mean anything?

What does it take to get people out on the streets?

The unlikely answer: Comedy Central late-night talk show hosts. Like the finale of this season's "Mad Men," pretty much no one saw this coming.

But come it has, and every indicator points to a hefty turnout for the Jon Stewart and Stephen Colbert event known alternatively as the "The Rally to Restore Sanity" and "The March to Keep Fear Alive." The permit application for Saturday's Washington, D.C., rally is for 60,000 people, according to the National Park Service, but more than 200,000 already have said they will attend on the Facebook event page. Whatever the number, the buzz alone says a great deal about the rally, certainly giving it as much cultural heft as Glenn Beck's recent "I'm standing a step below where Dr. King stood" Tea Party event, which drew just under 90,000, according to news report estimates.

Basically, Stewart and Colbert actually could be responsible for an iconic American moment. So this means something, right? The maddening question is—uh—what?

"The Daily Show with Jon Stewart" and "The Colbert Report" offer an intoxicating brew of low-brow comedy, satire and political commentary, but how exactly will that translate to a massive event in the nation's capital? Have they just read their audiences correctly and decided that a pre-Halloween, pre-election—though minimal commitment—event will give a lot of young people a great excuse to party? This journalist certainly plans to find out since I'll be covering it from the ground. (Yes, this is almost as dangerous and daring as, say, touring Somalia, but someone has to do it.)

In gathering the opinions of Chicagoans who plan to make the 13-hour, 700-mile drive for the gathering (and those holding a satellite rally to take place in Grant Park), I was struck by two things. First, a lot of people are going to D.C. A simple query on my blog netted dozens of car-poolers and two charter buses. Second, those attending had an awful lot to say about their reasons for going, 99 percent of which had a strongly political flavor.

Here's the thing: Even as Oprah donates the trip to D.C. to one of Stewart's studio audiences, Arianna Huffington provides buses, and Stewart and Colbert make the rounds on David Letterman and Larry King's shows, it's hard to call this thing just a couple of comedians doing a bit on a massive stage.

Stewart and Colbert clearly have tapped into a frustration that is pretty much the antithesis of the Tea Party rally that everyone assumes is this event's inspiration. As Comedy Central promoters phrase it so eloquently on the event's Facebook page, this is a gathering for those "who feel that the loudest voices shouldn't be the only ones that get heard; and who believe that the only time it's appropriate to draw a Hitler mustache on someone is when that person is actually Hitler."

I hope it's not too jarring a segue to quote "Spider-Man." But with great power—like the power to rally possibly tens of thousands in D.C.—comes great responsibility.

Stewart, in particular, long has hid his influence behind his role as a comedian, famously telling Tucker Carlson in a 2004 episode of CNN's "Crossfire," "The show that leads into me is puppets making crank phone calls," a reference to Comedy Central's show "Crank Yankers."

C'mon. Would 200,000 people say they're turning out for Rachel Maddow? Or George Clooney? Or any Democratic politician? (That last one is the funniest.) Stewart's influence is made plain just by his show's guest list. Even conservative heavy hitters such as Tea Party cheerleader Dick Arney, presidential hopeful Newt Gingrich and House Minority Whip Eric Cantor stop by Stewart's set to hawk books because opinion-makers and D.C. insiders—even on the right—watch it.

And despite their attempts to paint this rally as a tsk-tsk to extremism on "both sides," anyone who thinks Stewart and Colbert are anything but a decently left-of-center political thinkers is clearly not watching either show.

While people who call themselves conservative may attend and may also favor a more reasonable discourse, what's very obvious about the enthusiasm surrounding the rally is that it taps into the same mostly young, mostly liberal, kind of half-hearted political activism that helped send Barack Obama to the White House.

Two years on, that sense of purpose has been buried under a veritable landslide of bad news, tough legislative battles and hardening realities, yet Stewart and Colbert have at least partially unearthed it. The D.C. event

WHY ARE YOU GOING TO THE RALLY?

"[Stewart and Colbert] have become these iconic leaders of our generation. I had an communication ethics professor in college who said the most important shows on television right now are 'The Daily Show' and 'The Colbert Report' because in a society where change is necessary, satire is the most important thing." —Hannah Williams, 23, Park Ridge has become a beacon in the storm for those people because they see their movement still alive—if currently dormant.

But can two comedians espousing no proactive political platform corral the “busy majority” into a coherent movement? Or will their antidote turn out to be only a salve after which a lot of out-of-towners in bear costumes inundate the capital’s bar scene?

Speaking as someone who’s going, the latter option actually doesn’t sound that bad anyway—and maybe that’s the point: We all need to laugh for three hours, take a deep breath and bring the country’s temperature down a notch.

STEPHEN MARKLEY IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

“Well, of course the comedy—who doesn’t want a good laugh? The other reason is this is one way of being heard. I’m really tired of the hate, bickering and the misrepresentations of the facts. Death panels? Really? Come on. Why is health care for everyone bad? I want the people in power to know that some of us feel that this is the right direction to go. We just don’t have a good outlet before because we’re boring and boring doesn’t get ratings.”

—Promise Caesar, 39, Lincoln Square

“There are going to be a bunch of entertaining people there, and it’s going to be a lot of fun. But further than that, the underlying political message is serious and something I also want to be a part of. The extreme right in this country are not the only people who can rally... I think this is giving a voice to people who have concerns about the state of our economy and the Obama administration but who are choosing to voice those concerns in a rational way.

Chicago rally awaiting official permission

Chicago Tribune

For someone who’s six months pregnant, Angie McMahon has become quite adept at juggling and hurdling at the same time.

For her, organizing a Chicago rally to coincide with the Rally to Restore Sanity, hosted Saturday by Jon Stewart in Washington, D.C., has felt that way, said McMahon, a founding member of Chemically Imbalanced Theater in Lakeview.

Despite having a mere 38 days to coordinate the Chicago rally, she and others have raised more than $18,000, mostly through Facebook. They also expect as many as 5,000 people to attend the rally set for 11 a.m. Saturday in Grant Park.

Just one problem: As of Wednesday, city officials had yet to grant permission.

A Chicago Park District spokeswoman said McMahon’s group has yet to pay applicable fees and turn in an acceptable security plan.

McMahon said those details are being handled. She added she’s amazed that—with 6,700 Facebook page members contributing—this rally might actually happen.

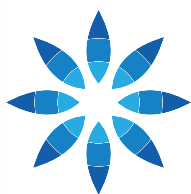

Planned Parenthood is the lone outside sponsor, offering $500 in exchange for having its logo displayed.

“Am I surprised? Absolutely, especially in this difficult economy,” McMahon said.

The group still is about $2,000 short, she said. Any profit from the event will go to a public high school on the South Side.

Hosted by satirist Aaron Freeman, the Chicago rally is set to include local comedians and activists, as well as live video feeds from the D.C. rally.

Dart: I won't run for mayor

Cook County Sheriff Tom Dart, who is seeking re-election next week, said Wednesday he will not run for Chicago mayor in February. Standing outside the jail he has overseen since 2007, Dart said he has struggled with the decision since Mayor Daley announced last month that he would not seek another term. "I couldn't do both," Dart said of running for mayor and being a father and husband. "It wasn't the appropriate thing for me just to take my time."

TRIBUNE

Talking tough

Senate candidates trade personal barbs in last debate

Chicago Tribune

Democrat Alexi Giannoulias and Republican Mark Kirk acted amicably at the beginning and end of their last debate in the U.S. Senate campaign Wednesday, but they filled the rest of the hour with innuendo and suggestions of guilt by association.

Both men traveled well-covered ground that they've exploited repeatedly in expensive TV attack ads. But the venue, a live broadcast on PBS, allowed them to confront each other directly.

Giannoulias sought to rebut Kirk's repeated use of a list of crime figures who got loans from the Democrat's failed family bank. Giannoulias said the Republican took donations from a host of people who pleaded guilty to political corruption.

"You know what, I brought my list. If you want to play these guilt-by-association attacks, let's do it," Giannoulias said, ticking off a list of people who pleaded guilty during the early investigation into disgraced former Gov. Rod Blagojevich's administration. "I can go on and on."

Kirk responded that his campaign refunded money "the moment we knew about criminal problems."

"What I didn't do is run a bank that had so many relationships to mobsters and villains," Kirk said of Broadway Bank.

"What I didn't do is bet the whole bank on risky real estate loans."

Kirk contended that Giannoulias, the first-term state treasurer, displayed his "immaturity" by "trying to have it both ways" in saying he would have voted for the congressional bailout of financial institutions while wanting more oversight in the legislation.

Kirk also accused Giannoulias of flip-flopping by saying he did not favor reopening the North American Free Trade Agreement, though the Democrat's website proposes to seek more labor and social protections. Giannoulias "wanted to start a trade war," Kirk said, prompting the Democrat to interject that the Republican's statement was "absolutely, unequivocally untrue."

The two began talking over each other so much that Kirk asked the show's host, Phil Ponce, to restore order.

"Do you want to moderate this?" Kirk asked.

Spartans' exit creates gridlock

Chicago Tribune

After rallying to beat Northwestern University's Wildcats on Saturday in Evanston, the Michigan State University Spartans created traffic gridlock as the football team cut and weaved out of Illinois.

In a maneuver usually reserved for U.S. presidents and other VIPs, Illinois State Police troopers for the first time escorted the Michigan State football caravan from Ryan Field on the Northwestern campus and along the Edens and Kennedy expressways toward Michigan. Previously, Evanston police would escort teams only to the entrance of the Edens Expressway in Skokie.

State police officials downplayed any negative effect, saying the traffic-stopping escort was no different from accompanying a funeral procession or a truck hauling an oversized load.

But Northwestern University Athletic Department officials, who paid for the escort and apparently believed it would go no farther than through Evanston to the entrance of the Edens, said they were surprised by the extent of the escort. They promised to fine-tune future escorts involving the state police.

Asked why the Spartans were given such rock-star treatment after a game when there was no reason to rush ahead of normal Chicago traffic, Scott Arey, Northwestern's assistant athletic director, said, "My wife had the same question for me. She was going the opposite way on the Edens" and saw the traffic knot caused by the escort.

Police say West Side man used van to steal meters

Chicago Tribune

A West Side man used his beat-up van to ram over several parking pay machines in Chicago and steal the coins inside, Cook County prosecutors charged Wednesday.

Jeffery Kaput, 38, toppled four of the 200-pound boxes in Austin and the Loop earlier this month, prosecutors said. Each machine held only about $50 in coins, a law enforcement source said.

"He would knock the boxes over with his van, at which point he would place them in the back of the van and remove the cash box," Assistant State's Attorney Lorraine Scaduto said at Kaput's bond hearing.

Police said another 16 boxes have been filched in similar fashion since mid-September. Most of the thefts took place on the Northwest Side. Kaput was arrested late Monday by officers on a robbery mission team after a witness gave a description of a van that crashed into a parking box, according to court records.

Some summer fests might slim down

Chicago Tribune

The city of Chicago might be forced to downsize or consolidate some of its smaller annual lakefront music festivals if attempts to privatize them fail, officials said Wednesday.

Megan McDonald, executive director of the Mayor's Office of Special Events, told aldermen during a hearing on the 2011 budget that the city will do its best to put on all the festivals: Taste of Chicago, the Viva Chicago Latin music festival, Celtic fest, Country Music Fest, Blues Fest, Jazz Fest and Gospel Fest.

But with the cost of mounting the festivals going up while attendees are spending less money on food and drinks, McDonald said it is becoming increasingly difficult for the city to pay for them. The city is planning to send out requests for proposals from private companies to run some or all of the festivals, which should happen in "the next few weeks," McDonald said.

Taste, Jazz Fest and Blues Fest are traditionally the city's marquee summer parties, so McDonald said it's unlikely there would be large changes to those if the city continues running them.

But the others could look very different if the city has to scramble to try to organize them in the wake of an unsuccessful search for a private firm, she said after the hearing.

"If we get to March, and suddenly we're trying to organize a festival that's scheduled in May, we may have to look at changing some things," McDonald said, noting that Celtic Fest started on May 8 this year.

And Country Music Fest could again become part of Taste, as it was for 16 years before getting its own, separate weekend on the lakefront in 2008.

City weighs recycling options

By Leonor Vivanco

REDEYE

The city is inching closer to looking for a private company to take over managing Chicago's blue cart recycling program.

The Department of Environment is working on crafting the official request for proposals from contractors, and the request should be issued in the next month, Streets and Sanitation Commissioner Thomas Byrne said at the city's budget hearing Tuesday.

Whether those proposals would be to maintain or expand service remains to be seen, the city said.

However, Ald. Anthony Beale (9th), whose ward covers Pullman, said the city either needs to find the resources to roll out the program to the entire city or stop the recycling program altogether.

Currently, 241,000 households (single-family homes and buildings of four units or fewer) have blue carts.

That means the 359,000 households eligible for the city recycling service are without carts. Service hasn't been expanded due to budget constraints.

"When they drive around and see them, my community is saying, 'Why don't we have the blue carts?' All I can tell them is we have resource problems, but they don't want to hear that," Beale said.

"They don't want to hear other communities have it and we don't. It looks like there's one community being favored over another."

Byrne had no comment on the option of charging a recycling fee as listed in the city's Inspector General's Office budget options report released earlier this week.

HOMICIDE TRACKER

By Tracy Swartz | REDEYE

Auburn Gresham saw three homicides in three days last week, a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data found.

On Oct. 18, an 18-year-old man was shot to death in the 8400 block of South Throop Street and a 25-year-old man was fatally shot in the 8700 block of South Ada Street, officials said. Two days later, a 33-year-old man was shot to death in the 8500 block of South Marshfield Avenue, according to officials.

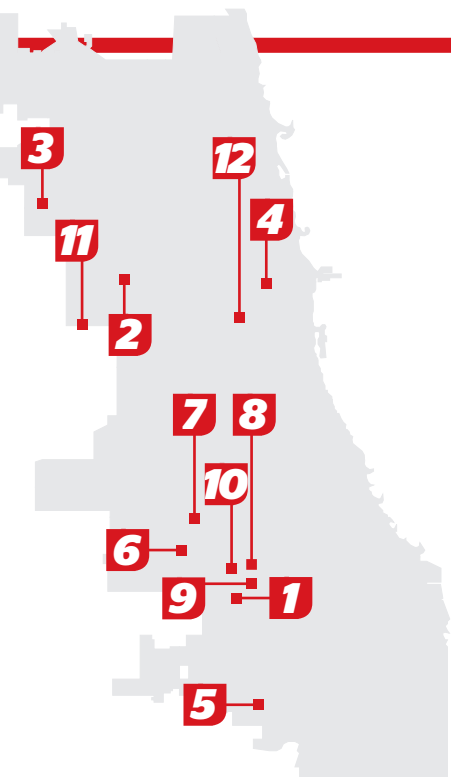

Meanwhile in Austin, two men were shot to death in separate incidents in the past two weeks. A 23-year-old man was shot to death Friday in the 5500 block of West Roosevelt Road, officials said. A 22-year-old man was fatally shot in the 2000 block of North Newland Avenue, according to officials.

Citywide, fatal shootings occurred in Ashburn, Chicago Lawn, Humboldt Park, the Lower West Side, the Near North Side and Washington Heights in the last two weeks, RedEye determined. Also, a 30-year-old man was stabbed last week in West Pullman. The victims from these homicides were all men between the ages of 15 and 59, according to data.

Twenty-five homicides have been recorded so far this month, according to data. Police recorded 36 homicides in October last year, RedEye found.

Notre Dame student dies

A 20-year-old Notre Dame student died Wednesday in South Bend, Ind., when a video tower overlooking the football team's practice collapsed in high winds and fell into an adjacent street. He was filming practice from a hydraulic scissor lift. The school announced the death in a news release but did not identify the male student.

MySpace makeover

MySpace is now My _____. In case you didn't catch that, when you see that underscore, your brain should say "space." The site on Tuesday announced a major revamp that aims to go beyond image tweaks, repositioning itself not as a social network that can compete with Facebook or Twitter, but as a "social entertainment destination for Gen Y."

Escaped jaguar caught

A jaguar that escaped and killed a U.S. citizen in Belize was captured late Tuesday. The jaguar escaped when Hurricane Richard hit the Central American nation Sunday. It later killed an American citizen, the U.S. government said, prompting the U.S. Embassy in Belize to warn Americans of the potential danger.

Pentagon wants to peer into future

WASHINGTON The Pentagon wants computers to see into the future—and stop crimes before they happen.

As the Army considers whether Col. Nidal Hasan, the suspect in last year's Fort Hood massacre, should face a court-martial, it also is looking at whether the military missed signals that might have indicated what was about to happen.

Now a Pentagon research arm is asking scientists to create a way to scan billions of e-mails to identify suspects in advance so that crimes can be stopped before they are committed.

That's the goal of the latest $35 million project announced by DARPA, the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, which is credited with breakthroughs such as the Internet, GPS and stealth technology.

Thunder struck

Bulls drop road opener, but pieces are in place for a successful season

RedEye

An offseason of hope and expectations ended Wednesday night as the new-look Bulls opened their season in Oklahoma City.

After they missed out on superstar free-agents LeBron James, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh, the Bulls put together a team around newly signed big man Carlos Boozer and returning stars Joakim Noah, Derrick Rose and Luol Deng.

So how did it all work out? Here's what we wanted to see in the opener against the Thunder and what we got.

WHAT WE WANTED TO SEE

The focus on defense that new coach Tom Thibodeau preaches.

WHAT WE GOT

This was not the game to use as a gauge for the Bulls' defensive abilities. The Thunder play fast-paced, and the Bulls were more than happy to do the same for most of the game. But when it counted, the Bulls had defensive breakdowns in the fourth quarter that allowed the Thunder to pull away.

WANTED: If Rose would take the next step in his development and if a summer of playing with other NBA stars in the FIBA World Championships would pay off.

GOT: Rose started strong and had a string of impressive, jaw-dropping drives to the hoop in the first half. The Bulls looked like a different team when he had to go to the bench with foul trouble later in the first. Rose finished with 28 points, six assists and four rebounds.

WANTED: Kyle Korver's long-distance shooting. He finished the preseason with a .333 shooting percentage from 3-point range.

GOT: Korver and his knee-high black socks didn't crack the rotation much, but he was on the floor for a key stretch of the fourth quarter and looked tentative. He had just four points on 2-of-5 shooting.

WANTED: The Twin Towers combo of Joakim Noah and Omer Asik on the floor at the same time.

GOT: Asik was the forgotten man Wednesday, logging less than three minutes while Noah was his usual self, piling up his usual double-double with 18 points and 19 rebounds. He also had two assists and two blocked shots.

WANTED: Taj Gibson improve on an awful preseason and show no signs of a sophomore slump.

GOT: He had four of the Bulls' first six points and played solid throughout, finishing with 16 points and 11 rebounds.

Trading? Be careful

If you offered your friend a Ford Focus for his Ferrari, his reaction probably would range somewhere between complete shock and slapping you in the face. We know this, yet some fantasy owners still propose lopsided trades such as Matt Moore and Jason Snelling for Drew Brees. This breed is called The Lowballer and should be avoided at all costs. Here are other do's and don'ts for fantasy trades.

Dr. Fantasy

redeyesports
@tribune.com

DO'S

» Know thy enemy: Get to know what your fellow league owners like and prefer. The guy whose team name is "Peyton's Place" will gladly trade for Peyton Manning.

» Add a personal touch: Be friendly and congenial. Ask the other owner how their season is going or compliment them on one of their draft picks. Flattery will get you everywhere.

» Be persistent: Most initial trade proposals fail. If your deal is shot down, offer something else or ask the potential trade partner what they're looking for.

DON'T'S

» Trade just to trade: It's dangerous when you and another owner decide randomly to trade out of boredom or in hopes of fixing a struggling team. Go into a trade with a clear goal in mind.

» Trade quantity for quality: Fantasy players aren't like Voltron—you can't get one Adrian Peterson for five crappy running backs.

» Be annoying: There's a fine line between persistent and being that annoying guy who sends out 10 trade offers a day. Don't give others a reason to resent you.

CRUSHES

» Marques Colston, New Orleans wide receiver: Colston has disappointing stats, but he's still seeing plenty of targets. The catches will come.

» Jason Witten, Dallas tight end: With Jon Kitna at QB, there will be fewer downfield throws. Witten will be Kitna's security blanket.

CRASHES

» Randy Moss, Minnesota wide receiver: His QB will be the limping Brett Favre or the wimpy Tarvaris Jackson.

» Knowshon Moreno, Denver running back: He's up against a terrible run D, but the Broncos are as committed to the run as the Bears. D.R. SMITH IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

1 Now that the NBA season has kicked off I'm officially in midseason form when it comes to ignoring the NBA.	... I have six fantasy teams to keep an eye on. It's exhausting.	... I can start rooting against the Heat. Prediction: 59-23.	... the Heat are quickly proving they'll fall short of the Bulls' 72-win season.	... I'm enjoying the Raptors' gloriously bad team. Fun fact: T. rexes HATE velociraptors.
2 What might Carlos Boozer have thought as he sat on the bench Wednesday night?	"Is Jimmy Greenfield happy? I need to call him."	"If it wasn't for gym bags, I'd be dunking right now. That was my story, right?"	"That gym bag is so dead. It came out of nowhere!"	"Those Thunder Girls look ... uh ... wholesome."	"Wow, this team sure could use a low-post scorer ... oh, wait."
3 Who has the biggest expectations to live up to this season: the Bulls or Blackhawks?	A second-round playoff exit would be a good season for the Bulls and bad for the Hawks.	The Bulls. The Blackhawks get a free pass for a couple of years for winning the Cup.	Perennial No. 4 seed or defending champs? Come on now.	Put it this way—the Stanley Cup is still hosting Hawks spit, while Larry O' reeks of Kobe.	Bulls. After a team wins a title, they get five years to coast. Also, time's up, White Sox.
4 What would happen if Ryne Sandberg got a job on the White Sox's coaching staff?	Both fan bases would collectively vomit.	Wrigleyville might implode with shock.	The Earth would fall off its axis. At least Chicago's weather will improve.	Ozzie would immediately begin butchering his name, calling him "Sandbag" or "Hippo."	"Ryno and the Oz," the worst morning zoo drive time radio team ever.
5 What Chicago sports team most needs Sue the T-Rex's help?	The Bears, so the McCaskey family can have another dinosaur to talk to.	Can Sue play offensive line for the Bears somehow?	Just what we need: More old bones on the field. It'd be cool if the Bears played at the Field Museum though.	The Bears' O-line could use at least one Sue. Can we give them a couple?	University of Chicago. With me, the Maroons can finally make it back to the Big Ten!

THE BIG ELEVEN

RedEye rounded up fans/alums/students of every Big Ten school to give us their biased look at college football every Thursday during the season. Join their antics on Twitter using the hash tag #red10.

Three Big Ten teams in the Top 10 is like ...

How is your team like Halloween?

 Dana Mortensen  Illinois @danamarie26	... Bosh, Wade and LeBron on the Heat. People in the Big Ten love it, and the rest just can't handle it.	They're like a haunted house—while the game's happening I'm scared. When it's over, I'm relieved.
 Jim Hoff  Indiana @jfhoff	... the Big Ten turned into the Southeastern Conference. Only our fans have more teeth per capita.	One word: frightening. You decide whether it best describes Halloween or the IU defense.
 Tony Gatz  Iowa @tonygatz	... being a member of the SEC or the Big 12.	Iowa has a frightening defense, just please don't trick us with the fake punt.
 Victor H. Soto  Michigan @vicsoto	... an early Christmas present. As long as they don't blow it in the bowl game.	Have you seen our defense? It's scarier than anything you might see on Halloween.
 Julie Adamski  Michigan State @JulieTheresaA	... pretty cool, but how about MSU being the only Big Ten team in the top five in the BCS.	We make the other team wet themselves in fear before we walk onto the field.
 Bekki Chapman  Minnesota @bekkijc	... a big, ol' party that Minnesota never gets invited to.	You have to cover your eyes in fear for both of them.
 Campbell Roth  Northwestern @soupgirl	... three more chances for the Big Ten to blow three BCS bowl games	Last Saturday I was treated, then I was tricked. At least I was drinking.
 Brad Obermeyer  Ohio State @SirBardley	... Bruce Willis in "Die Hard." Not seen as a threat until we toss Hans Gruber off a building.	Both have long histories and traditions, but are now mostly excuses for people to dress funny and drink.
 Ian Patrick  Penn State @NittLion78	... watching Cutler take a snap behind the Bears O-line—you just know it's gonna end badly.	One of us is pretending to be Indiana Jones, the other pretending to be competitive.
 Andrea Bailiff  Purdue @acbailiff	... having three kids and saying you'd never choose a favorite. (When secretly you know your fave is MSU.)	No one really thinks about it until two weeks before the season. Even then, the entire event is an extreme letdown.
 Blair Vender  Wisconsin @Blender86	... Christmas. Aside from the obvious reasons, there's so much red and green!	Like the girls in their scanty costumes, the Badgers are ready to score.

BLACKHAWKS 3, LOS ANGELES 1

FINE LINES

QUENNEVILLE SHAKES UP LINEUP; HAWKS RESPOND WITH WIN

Joel Quenneville shook up the Blackhawks' forwards lines and the result was anything but shaky.

The coach radically shuffled the lineup in an effort to spark his team out of the doldrums of a two-game losing streak and got the desired effect as the Hawks defeated the Kings 3-1 on Wednesday night at the United Center.

"Over the course of the year you probably try just about every combination possible," Quenneville said. "After two losses you want to mix it up a little bit."

Jake Dowell, Viktor Stalberg and Patrick Sharp scored for the Hawks to support a solid effort by goaltender Marty Turco in front of a crowd of 20,667. The win over a much-improved Kings squad from a season ago upped the Hawks' record to 6-4-1 while L.A. dropped to 6-3-0.

Turco yielded a first-period goal by Justin Williams but nothing more as he outdueled Kings goalie Jonathan Bernier. But the win might have been costly for the Hawks as veteran winger Marian Hossa left the game early in the second period with an undisclosed injury and did not return.

Dowell got the Hawks off to a fast start with his first goal of the season. At the 5-minute, 16-second mark of the first, the fourth-line center skated around Kings defenseman Davis Drewiske and sent a backhand toward the goal. The puck deflected off Drewiske's stick and popped over Bernier's left shoulder for a 1-0 Hawks lead.

The Kings tied it at 9:34 of the opening period when Justin Williams batted the puck past Turco from the bottom of the right circle. Turco finished with 33 saves.

Campbell skates again

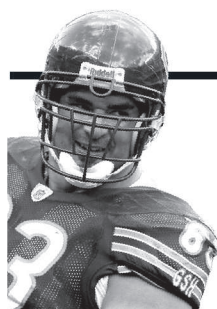

The healing process for Brian Campbell's right knee is nearing completion, and now the Blackhawks defenseman is concentrating on getting back into game shape before he returns to the lineup.

Campbell skated with teammates Wednesday morning at the United Center for the first time since suffering a sprained knee Oct. 1 in an exhibition game.

"It was my first day with the guys so it was a good challenge," said Campbell, who will wear a brace on the knee for the rest of the season. "I'm feeling better every day. I'd like to get back as soon as possible but I'm not sure what that date is yet. I don't feel 100 percent out there in all areas. Conditioning-wise I'm definitely behind a little bit."

In the veteran's absence, Hawks defensemen have been piling up ice time, in particular Duncan Keith, who is averaging a league-high 29 minutes, 44 seconds per game.

"It's never a great thing to play too many minutes," Campbell said. "I know Duncan is playing a ton of minutes. It's something you obviously don't want to do all year. Hopefully when I get back I can help out."

» The Bears have not come out and said it, but when they come out of their bye next week, they will do so with their fifth combination of starters on the offensive line. Roberto Garza (left), who did rehab work on the side Wednesday at practice, is expected to regain the right guard job he held from 2006 through 2009.

» Although Miami looked ragged in an 88-80 loss to Boston on Tuesday, the game attracted 7,433,000 total viewers and 5,339,000 households, making it the most watched regular-season NBA game on cable ever (topping the Bulls vs. Lakers on Feb. 2, 1996).

» Weekend passes for the annual Cubs Convention will go on sale at 10 a.m. Wednesday. The 2011 Cubs Convention is set for Jan. 14-16 (Friday through Sunday) at the Hilton Chicago.

FINAL

» Oklahoma City 4, Wolves 1 » World Series Game 1: San Francisco 11, Texas 7. San Francisco leads series 1-0.

Good thing none of Chicago's sports teams are on TV tonight, because I'll be watching "It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown." Here now, my picks.

San Francisco vs. Texas
6:30 p.m. Fox

1 Giants 6, Rangers 3
Giants win solely based on the ex-White Sox factor.

Orlando vs. Washington
7 p.m. TNT

2 Magic 108, Wizards 88
No. 1 draft pick John Wall will be fun to watch in the loss.

Wolves vs. Texas
7 p.m. Allstate Arena

3 Wolves 5, Stars 3
I have a sinking feeling the Wolves might end up being better than the Blackhawks.

What's shaking at new West Loop club 8 Fifty 8

By Lisa Arnett

REVIEW

8 Fifty 8
858 W. Lake St.
312-455-2776

With clubs constantly closing and reopening with new names and tweaked concepts, Chicago's nightlife scene always keeps us guessing. We stopped in at 8 Fifty 8, the latest nightspot to take up residence at 858 W. Lake St. in the West Loop, during its grand opening weekend to size up the situation.

YOU'RE NOT THE ONLY ONE ...

... who may be confused about what name you should call this address. We faintly remember it as District before it became Reserve, which closed in 2008. The place was remodeled and reopened as Theatro in spring 2009, and after closing months later, it has since played host to one-off party nights under names The Embassy and Mansion. Promos bouncing around on social media earlier this fall announced the Oct. 22 opening of Opera Ultra Lounge, but days before opening, management decided to change the name to 8 Fifty 8. A smart move, we think, since there's now much less chance of cabs pulling up to South Loop restaurant Opera or Lyric Opera House.

YOU'LL BE IN GOOD COMPANY WITH ...

... the usual cast of club characters. There's the guy who hasn't stopped flexing his biceps since he walked in. The dude struggling to read his cell phone through dark sunglasses. And the girls engaged in an unspoken competition for shortest and/or tightest skirt. Unless you're working a unique accessory, chances are you won't stand out in the sea of mini-dresses and suit jackets. Props to the gal working fingerless leather gloves and the guy in the red satin vest for catching our attention.

DON'T EXPECT ANYTHING OUT OF THE ORDINARY WHEN IT COMES TO ...

... the drinks, at least for now. Until a variation of bottle service debuts the weekend of Nov. 6, bartenders are serving up your basic mixed drinks, wine and beer. Instead of just one bottle of booze and basic sodas and juices for mixing, a VIP host will set you up with different pre-made mixers for specialty house drinks. It sounds like something along the lines of the specialty bottle service offerings served at Double A, the tiny cocktail lounge below Mercadito, or late-night club Stone Lotus prior to its ownership change earlier this year. Regardless of how it shakes out, we're bored with plain ol' bottle service and have to commend any divergence from the formula.

the breakdown

Beer vs. cocktail ratio: 70/30
Girls vs. guys ratio: 60/40
Velvet rope factor: High. Door staff uses iPads to mind the guest list.
When to go: 9 p.m.-2 a.m. Friday; 10 p.m.-3 a.m. Saturday
Before you go: RSVP on 8ifty8.com for no cover before 11 p.m. After 11 p.m., cover ranges from $5-$20
Hookup factor: Hot. The music's too loud for much conversation, so a little action isn't out of the question.
Danceability: High. Tracks switch from Katy Perry to Lady Gaga to La Roux with satisfying speed.

» River North's newest gay bar, Downtown (440 N. State St.), is now open in the space that was the short-lived Lucky Lady, and before that, Gentry.

» The owners of Xippo have opened Chuckie's, a new bar and grill in Rogers Park (1412 W. Morse Ave.).

» After a few delays, the soon-to-be-heated beer garden is now open at Logan Square's Boiler Room (2210 N. California Ave.).

» The owners of The Fifty/50 just announced the spring 2011 opening of Roots (1924 W. Chicago Ave.), a Quad City-style pizzeria and bar. See Page 22 for more.

WE WERE DISAPPOINTED THAT ...

... the club doesn't look much different than it did when it opened as Teatro. The same jet-black tufted banquettes, gold details and framed art of masked beauties are all going strong. Inside the elevated glass cube on the east wall, a trio of sunglasses-wearing models struck pose after pose. Teatro's trademark masks above the staircase have been replaced by a mirror, but that's about all we noticed. Admittedly, the crowd didn't seem to care.

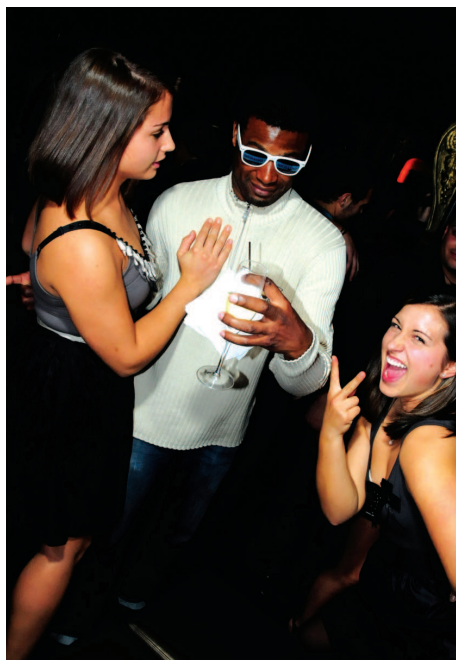

WE WERE IMPRESSED BY ...

... the talent that's been booked so far. DJ Mr. Best spun for the grand opening bash, and porn star/"Entourage" actress Sasha Grey is scheduled to appear Friday and may even step into the DJ booth.

BOTTOM LINE

What we saw opening weekend seemed like any other club, so we'll have to give this place some time to see if it can set itself apart from the pack.

5THINGSTOKNOW: ROOTS & BLEEDING HEART

BY LISA ARNETT

Scott Weiner and Greg Mohr, the guys behind Wicker Park sports bar The Fifty/50, are hard at work launching their next project at 1916-1924 W. Chicago Ave., and it's going to be a big one: a 200-seat pizzeria and bar called Roots next door to the new home base for Bleeding Heart Bakery & Cafe. It won't open until March 2011, but these tidbits should whet your appetite:

1. It's been a long time coming

Mohr and Weiner have been searching for the right space for Roots for months, and after getting to know Bleeding Heart's Michelle and Vinny Garcia (who live near The Fifty/50 and eat there often), they decided to collaborate. Sports-bar dudes teaming up with punk-rock bakers sounds like a cool combo to us.

2. The pizza's Quad City-style

Mohr, who grew up in Rock Island, and Weiner brought on Wise Guys Pizza owner Marv Wise (who also spent years at the Quad Cities' well-known Harris Pizza) to consult on this particular style of pizza, known for its hand-tossed pies cut into strips with scissors. "It's not crispy thin-crust, but it's definitely not deep-dish," Weiner says. "The crust has a very specific spice mix ... and it has dark malt in it, which gives it a sweet nuttiness."

3. The drinks may give you flashbacks

More than a dozen Midwestern-brewed beers may not bring you back to your childhood, but Roots' house-brewed root beer on tap and spiked sodas in big ol' pizzeria-style Pepsi cups just might.

4. The bakery won't just bake

Bleeding Heart's two-story bakery and cafe won't just be about the organic treats and crazy cakes that the Garcias have become known for. Michelle also will flex her brunch muscles (she once co-owned and designed the menu at Humboldt Park's Flying Saucer) with dishes such as mushroom polenta eggs Benedict with persimmon hollandaise and decadent doughnut breakfast sammies. The Garcias will look to Bleeding Heart's most popular cupcake flavors as inspiration for its coffee drinks, pancakes and waffles.

5. There will be plenty to watch

Thanks to a glassed-in kitchen and viewing mirrors, you'll be able to watch staffers in action tossing pizza dough at Roots. At Bleeding Heart, passersby can spy Vinny decorating cakes in the storefront window.

NIGHTCRAWLERS

SEEN ON THE SCENE AT ... Parlour, 6341 N Clark St.

On Saturday night, we mingled with crowds at Edgewater lounge Parlour, which caters to the LGBT community and other neighborhood folks who want to grab a drink and have a good time.

BY CRAIG SEYMOUR

Neomi Luna
24, optician

Can hanging out in dark nightclubs negatively affect your eyesight?

No. That's absolutely a myth.

How would you describe Parlour's vibe?

The vibe is very friendly. Good crowd. Very good music.

What are you drinking and why?

I'm drinking a Miller Lite beer. I'm cut off from vodka because I'm too crazy. I would not be drinking beer otherwise.

Jerome Edwards
41, flight attendant

What's your worst in-flight experience with a passenger?

A couple was having sex in the bathroom. I knocked on the door, told them to come out and [the guy] said, "Don't ever do that again or I'll hit you in the face."

Do flight attendants judge people, like me, who order drinks on early-morning flights?

If they order a cocktail, yeah, we do judge, especially if it's not clear liquor, if it's Jack or Wild Turkey. We think they're still up from the night before or they're alcoholics.

What are you drinking tonight?

I'm drinking a Rose Kennedy—vodka, soda and a splash of cranberry.

Elvis Costello

!!! "National Ransom"
Hear Music

Elvis Costello's latest finds the singer-songwriter sneering about shakedowns, picked-clean bones and ravenous wolves. Notably, the title track seethes with a blue-collar rage clearly inspired by Wall Street and the corporate culture that has seen executive bonuses escalate even as high unemployment numbers continue unabated.

But while current headlines might have inspired the 56-year-old's latest thorny outburst, the remainder of the album, recorded in Nashville and L.A. with producer T Bone Burnett, ventures into murkier terrain. Traversing Dixieland, barroom blues and country-rock, Costello appears to equate modern troubles with humankind's inherently wicked nature. "Man is a miserable ape and a sad pile of sticks," he croons over jazzy piano on "My Lovely Jezebel." "He comes out swinging, gets in a few licks." Best of all? The noir-ish, highly literate "All These Strangers," which unfolds like prime Hitchcock.

Hugh Hefner
PLAYBOY ENTERPRISES

Hugh Hefner, star of a new documentary, dishes about Playboy's move from Chicago

Hugh Hefner's life defies conventional logic.

From his Hyde Park apartment in the conservative 1950s, he launched a magazine filled with naked women—and, of course, articles by renowned writers such as Ray Bradbury—and turned it into a global phenomenon. He has had as many as seven live-in girlfriends at once, which he calls “an overreaction to an unhappy marriage,” and later whittled that down to a far more, um, traditional, three. Currently, the 84-year-old Northwest Side native's girlfriend, 24-year-old Crystal Harris, probably is younger than yours.

Now the Playboy editor and publisher gets his own big-screen treatment in Oscar-winning documentarian Brigitte Berman's affectionate “Hugh Hefner: Playboy, Activist and Rebel,” opening Friday at the Gene Siskel Film Center.

The film focuses less on Hefner's role as an idolized sex symbol and more on his refusal to conform to repressive societal standards, whether he's expanding people's views of sexuality or featuring mixed-race bands on the TV show “Playboy's Penthouse” at a time when that sort of thing just wasn't done.

Hefner, who hasn't lived in Chicago since 1975, returns Thursday and Friday for the movie's premiere before heading west to a Halloween party (his and Harris' planned costumes: vampire and mermaid).

From the L.A. Playboy Mansion, Hefner talked about Playboy's impending move from Chicago, Robert Downey Jr. playing him in a biopic and a controversial area of Chicago he's proud to have influenced.

In the film, you say that sex is the single thing that most interests men. What's the one thing that most interests women?

Security probably. And offspring. The next generation. Children.

On their list of priorities, what number is sex?

I think you'd have to talk to ladies about that. That probably depends very much on who the lady is. For some it is an important consideration, and others it's not very important at all.

MORE HUGH
Hef had a lot more to say. Find the full interview at metromix.com.

What do you think of the possibility of Robert Downey Jr. playing you?

Well, I think it's a compliment. He did "Chaplin." He's a very good actor ... After "Iron Man," of course, he became a superstar. He called me the following week and said, "All right, when are we going to do the Playboy film?" So if we get a good screenplay, that's what we're going to do.

Why are you trying to repurchase all the shares of the company and take it private?

Because I think the company is undervalued, and I think the company needs strong partners. We need capital infusion and strong synergistic partners that can take us ... the company's been floundering, but as a brand we're hotter than ever.

Will the offices be moving out of Chicago?

I think we're probably going to be doing that out of economic concerns, yes. We will be probably consolidating on the West Coast. [A Playboy spokeswoman Wednesday told the Tribune that the company has "no plans" to move from Chicago.]

Any chance you'll re-open a mansion here?

In Chicago? No chance at all. It's a combination of condos there owned by a number of different people.

I'm sure you can find another mansion. We'd be happy to help it prosper.

Why would I want to?

'Cause we want you to.

[Laughs.] Well, you know, I think the weather is prohibitive there in certain times of the year. The truth of the matter is I really have lived in two places all my life. In other words, the roots come from Chicago, clearly, and I have never lost connection with that. My childhood and teenage years, when the dreams were being dreamed, remain very close to me, and they are really the heart of what I'm all about. But the other part of it came from the West Coast, came from Hollywood. I truly did find a second home here.

On Twitter, @iamronchicago wanted to know if you have a plan for when you will retire.

I don't think I will ever retire. I think that's the first step toward the grave. It's the work and play and staying active that keeps you young.

What do you think of "The Viagra Triangle"?

The what triangle?

The Viagra Triangle. The Gold Coast area, not far from where the original Playboy Mansion was. Have you heard that before?

No, I haven't.

The Viagra Triangle. Because there are frequently older men there with younger women.

Oh, the Viagra Triangle! [Laughs.] And it's the Gold Coast area? You're talking about the Near North Side, where the clubs were? And that's now known as the Viagra Triangle? Maybe I started something in that area!

You'd be proud of that?

[Laughs.] Yes! I think that's pretty funny.

How often do you take a look around you and marvel? A lot of people would think you'd be in awe all the time.

Yes. In other words, I am a very introspective and reflective person, so on a number of occasions I simply in effect pinch myself and think, "Is this really a dream? Am I going to wake up tomorrow?" From my own perspective, I am the luckiest guy on the planet.

Hefner at a glance

Why he's going back to the mansion for Halloween: "If I was in Chicago, I'd have to go door to door trick-or-treating."

On crossing a 60-year age gap in a relationship: "If you have someone that you really have a lot in common with, age, as long as you are reasonably physically fit, age really doesn't make a lot of difference. But I think it depends on the person."

What he said when people asked about having multiple girlfriends: "Well, it's a lot easier than just one wife."

Lady Gaga
GETTY

Copying meat dress would be ill-advised

The Hartford Courant

The words "Lady Gaga" and "campy" frequently are heard together. But how about "Lady Gaga" and "campylobacteriosis"?

That's one of the many terrible infections one can get from handling bad raw meat. And it's worth considering if the many Halloween experts who have been quoted in the past few weeks are correct that the meat dress is near the top of this year's costumes.

Ever since Lady Gaga showed up at the 2010 MTV Video Music Awards wearing a meat dress, it seemed inevitable that Halloween parties would sport DIY Gaga-style butchery. But the dangers of doing so go well beyond the possibility of running into PETA members Halloween night.

Granted, consuming bad meat is the surest way of getting any of these ailments. But just touching it and bringing your hands to mouth or eyes runs the risk.

Fever, muscle ache, diarrhea and dysentery are some of the symptoms of campylobacteriosis. And that infection is one of the milder risks that come with contaminated meat.

There's also, for example, toxoplasmosis, where you become host to some rather nasty parasites. Many people infected with toxoplasmosis don't get sick from it, but when they do things can get bad quickly. For many, it's no worse than a mild flu. But for others it can lead to brain damage or death.

All of which is to say: Don't wear a meat dress. Even if you prepare and store your meat dress in a cooler (below 40 degrees Fahrenheit as suggested by the USDA), you'll likely be venturing out Halloween night for more than two hours—that's the rule of thumb at which good meat goes bad.

If you're hellbent on going Gaga, surely there are some enterprising costume makers selling a facsimile of the meat dress. You'll lose something in authenticity, but you'll gain a post-Halloween free of campylobacteriosis, toxoplasmosis and who knows what else.

TV 'Project Runway'

8 p.m. Thursday, Lifetime

How can Heidi Klum and crew possibly top Michael C.'s epic elimination meltdown last week? "What am I gonna tell my mother and father?" he bawled before leaving with a box of tissues. We can only hope Gretchen, Mondo or Andy—or guest judge Jessica Simpson—will be just as dramatic. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

VIDEO GAME 'Tony Hawk: Shred'

XB360, PS3, Wii

The guys at Chicago game developer Robomodo had a full year to tweak and improve the software to go along with their plastic skateboard peripheral from 2009's "Ride." It shows in "Tony Hawk: Shred." The latest in the Tony Hawk skating franchise feels a bit more like skating than its predecessor; you can pull off moves like 360-degree spins with much greater frequency. That said, there's nothing too realistic about "Shred" considering you can grind off the edges of buildings, pull off impossibly difficult tricks and even land by slamming a crater into the pavement. If you want an experience that's the equivalent of "Guitar Hero" for skateboarders, "Shred" is worth a look.

RYAN SMITH FOR REDEYE (CHICAGONOW.COM/GAMESMITH)

ALBUM 'Olympia'

Bryan Ferry

Post-Roxy Music Bryan Ferry has only one go-to move: the sly, sophisticated croon that made "Avalon" a classic. Luckily, he doesn't need much else. "Olympia," his first album in eight years, confirms it. The first single, "You Can Dance," even feels like a continuation of "Slave to Love," while Brian Eno's synths on "Alpha ville" are reminders of Roxy's headier days. While "Heartache by Numbers" with Scissor Sisters and his take on Tim Buckley's "Song to the Siren" seem misplaced, Ferry shows his ongoing mastery of the form on the aching "Tender Is the Night."

“After 2 weeks, my blood sugar went from 180 to 120 and stayed there!”
Breakthrough “Antioxidant” Diabetic Drink Hailed ‘A Miracle’

Naturally improves blood sugar, cholesterol, circulation, energy and more in as little as 2 weeks!

“I’ve been a diabetic for 48 years, my quality of life has been restored!”

What part of your diabetes would you like to see ‘go away?’ Are you plagued by weight gain and food cravings, high and low blood sugar levels, mood swings, low energy and constant fatigue, poor circulation, vision problems, intermittent pain or aggravating bouts of brain fog or memory lapses?

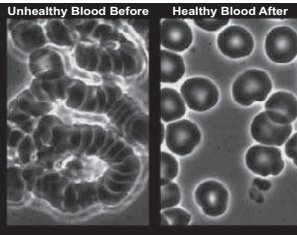

There is good news and it comes in the form of an effervescent drink called OPC Factor, which quickly revitalizes your entire body and mind.

Better Blood Sugar!

“My doctor was amazed! I don’t know what you’re doing, but keep doing it!”

Holistic health specialist, Dr. Charles Berg, says, “Antioxidant therapy may slow progress of impaired glucose tolerance.”

Diabetic Doyle Allen is living proof. “After only two weeks, my blood sugar went from 180 to 120 and stayed there!”

Washes away blood sludge by eliminating toxins, free radicals, and even parasites!

This product is not intended to diagnose, treat, cure or prevent any disease. These statements have not been evaluated by the FDA. Results not typical.

The secret is a powerful blend of super antioxidants called oligomeric proanthocyanadins, or OPCs including powerhouses like grape seed, green tea, pine bark, and red wine extracts, along with lemon bioflavonoids, resveratrol, and 23 naturally occurring vitamins and enzymes.

No more horse pills to swallow!

Cell Essential’s OPC Factor™ is the first 100% organic formula fueled by a revolutionary, high-speed ‘liquid’ delivery system that mimics the body’s natural pH. This provides an amazing 97% absorption rate.

“Pills and tablets have absorption rates as low as 2 to 20%,” says Dr. Berg.

Results in as little as 20 Minutes!

Actual blood scans taken twenty minutes apart show how OPC Factor virtually flushes away free radicals, excess cholesterol crystals and sugar molecules in the bloodstream.

Excess sugar in your blood causes oxidation which leads to “slow sticky blood,” a problem linked to neuropathy and edema in extremities as well as kidney damage and even blindness. OPC Factor greatly improves circulation promoting faster blood flow; crucial for diabetics.

“OPC Factor has helped lower my glucose levels. I sleep better and have more energy and better circulation,” says Charles Leavitt.

NIH Study Proves It!

“I can feel it when I drink it,” says Ken Murdock. “It gives a lot of energy.”

A National Institute of Health funded “Double Blind” clinical study published in July, 2008, supports customer claims about energy. For diabetics, energy equals better sleep, moods, and overall balance.

“Studies have found that free radicals produce oxidation that disrupts insulin. OPC Factor works 20-50 times better than traditional antioxidants against oxidation,” says Dr. Charles Berg. “OPCs enhance insulin’s ability to lower blood sugar.”

Jacki Rolph, a diabetic from Idaho Falls, echoes this, “If you’ll get on this product and try it, you’ll love it. I’ve been diabetic for 48 years, OPC Factor helped decrease my insulin by a third -- I have my life back!”

Receive One-Month Free!

Try OPC Factor risk-free today and receive a free 30-Day Bonus supply along with a free book, The Aging Antidote, a $20 value. OPC Factor is clinically proven to boost your energy, and help restore youthful circulation, cholesterol and blood sugar levels.

It’s backed by a 90-day satisfaction guarantee so you can experience the short and long term results risk free, too! Call today!

TRIBUNE FILE

The bonus of the fitness buddy

Reuters

Fitness loves company, whether it’s a running buddy, a spotter in the weight room or a pal to bolster your courage as you tackle that first yoga class.

Experts say buddying up can make your workout easier to stick with and harder to miss.

“People don’t necessarily work out for social reasons, but that social factor can keep them working out,” said Kerri O’Brien of the equipment manufacturer Life Fitness. “And stopping becomes more difficult when you have to overcome those social bonds.”

Whether you’re trying to lose weight or train for a marathon, O’Brien said sharing goals strengthens bonds as well as resolve.

A national survey of 1,000 adult exercisers conducted by Life Fitness found that 27 percent of women prefer to work out with a friend.

“As with any new habit, if you have the opportunity to talk and make decisions with another person, you’re more likely to stay with it,” she said.

For Jessica Matthews of the American Council on Exercise, it’s all about accountability. “One of the perceived barriers to exercise is motivation: getting it there, getting it done,” she said. “If you know someone’s waiting on you, it might prompt you to exercise on a day when you would not if you were doing it solo.”

She’s often seen women who go to the gym set up a little circuit among themselves, using dumbbells, resistance bands and leg presses in rotation. Men, too, often spot each other in the weight room and offer advice on form, she said.

Adam David, owner of the Viva Vinyasa yoga studio in New York City, thinks there’s nothing like a friend to put your workout in perspective.

“When you’re working with a friend, there’s a level of enthusiasm that’s relaxing but productive,” said David, a veteran yoga instructor. “Your ambition is balanced with the sense of humor to realize that it’s not that critical.”

David said the desire to beg off is more easily expressed by his private clients.

“In a group no one’s going to say that,” he said. “The group environment doesn’t indulge sloth.”

O’Brien suggests finding a partner with the same goals and general level of ability, “so you’re pushing each other, as opposed to one person pulling the other through the workout.”

And she cautions that this bond, like any other, needs tending.

“Working out should strengthen the relationship, not stress it,” she said, “So choose times convenient for both, and try not to overpromise each other.”

Crucial to maintenance is what O’Brien calls that open respect conversation.

“Discuss what your goals are, and if they change, share them with each other,” she said. “Check in with each other at every workout.”

Spooky DVDs deliver shrieks ... of laughter

Halloween isn't just for scares; it's for fun. With that in mind, here are three recently released DVDs that deliver laughs as well as screams. MCT

'Cannibal Girls'

This 1973 Canadian horror spoof arrived with the "Warning Bell," in which the-atergoers would hear a bell sound just before a particularly violent and bloody scene, the better to close one's eyes. (The bell is an optional feature on the DVD.) It also introduced director Ivan Reitman ("Meatballs," "Stripes," "Ghost Busters") and future SCTV comedy troupe members Eugene Levy ("American Pie" movies) and Andrea Martin. Levy and Martin play a couple seeking a romantic getaway at a cute little bed-and-breakfast run by three women. How could they know that the sweet-looking proprietors are providing the bed so that their guests can become their breakfast?

'Piranha'

In 1978, Roger Corman's New World Pictures delivered this low-budget rip-off/homage/spoof of Steven Spielberg's "Jaws," in which lots of sharp little teeth produce even more blood from innocent human swimmers. Released on DVD and Blu-ray as part of the "Roger Corman's Cult Classics" series, "Piranha" marked some of the earliest screen work by director Joe Dante ("The Howling," "Gremlins") and screenwriter John Sayles ("Return of the Secaucus Seven," "Eight Men Out," "Lone Star"). Sayles provided the clever scenario in which the piranhas in question were developed by the U.S. military as a biological weapon for use in the Vietnam War, a project that was abandoned and later covered up. The deadly little munchers are accidentally released from their top-secret military compound and swim upstream, where they conveniently discover a children's summer camp and a brand-new swanky water resort. Yum.

'Lake Placid 3'

In case your memory fails you, the original "Lake Placid" (1999) placed the blame for the giant species of Crocodylia appearing in peaceful Black Lake in Maine on little old Betty White, who had been feeding them from her lakefront cottage. In "Lake Placid 2" (2007), Cloris Leachman played Betty's sister, another giant croc lover. This time around, it's the son of a forest ranger/biologist who initially feeds a bunch of young reptiles—and yes, that's plural. Soon the crocs grow really big and commence feeding on an assortment of attractive backpackers who obligingly take off all their clothes before jumping into the seemingly calm lake water. Not only are these crocs huge—30- to 40-footers, most likely—but they also hunt in packs, like the Velociraptors in the "Jurassic Park" movies, and move as quickly on land as they do in water. It's all silly, gruesome, campy stuff, with all that full frontal nudity pushing the DVD into unrated territory.

WELCOME TO CHICAGO

through her seasons, as captured by Chicago Tribune photographers. Inside this book, you'll discover the visually exquisite city of Chicago, with its vast skylines, elegant details and aerials that beg to be studied, inch by inch. Whatever the season, whatever the time of day, Chicago Tribune photographers are out there—watching, composing, recording. We've culled our favorites from the past few years by poring over thousands of images. The best of the best will be included in this beautiful, artistic, hard-bound "keepsake" book perfect for your coffee table.

Reserve your copy today and save $10! After the book is released in November, a limited number of copies will be available for $34.95. Don't miss this opportunity to save! Order online at chicago.seasonsbook.com or by phone at 312-222-2600.

MP3 boombox for travelers

iMainGo2

$39.99 at amazon.com or target.com

What it is: A handheld speaker case, with titanium speakers, for iPod and iPhone, or, frankly, any MP3 player, but you may not be able to operate all players through the clear-press pad.

How it works: Place your iPod or other device behind the clear-plastic cover opposite the speakers, plug the jack into your device, place a foam barrier behind the device and zip the container closed. The unit requires four AAA batteries. To operate the speakers, you must zip open the container and flip the "on" switch. The manufacturer claims 30 hours of playback time per set of batteries.

The good: I usually limit travel gear to the bare minimum, but I took this along to give it a fair shot on the road. Wow, am I glad I tried it. I used it with a SanDisk MP3 player beside a private neighborhood pool. I had to turn it down for fear of disturbing the neighbors. This is, hands down, the best speaker of the iPod type that I have ever heard, with rich tones. The bass is amazing for its size; it's like a boombox, only it's a mere 3.8 by 2.4 by 5.7 inches.

The bad: If you don't have an MP3 player that's perfectly flat, you may have difficulty putting the device inside, though that's not a huge issue. In fact, you also can plug any number of devices into it, such as laptops, portable gaming systems, even electric guitars. ROSS WERLAND, TRIBUNE

Dear

FILL IN THE BLANKS ON TAYLOR SWIFT'S NEXT BREAKUP SONG

By Dana Moran

REDEYE

Gentleman callers should be careful when messing with Taylor Swift's heart—a lot of people are listening, and she has a habit of giving exes starring roles in her music. The 20-year-old songstress released her third album Monday, "Speak Now," which is on target to sell up to 1 million copies in its first week, billboard.com reports. We chopped up lines from some of Swift's new songs—plus some classics—to let you do the writing for her. You're welcome, Taylor!

Name game

Can a man who's about to go to prison for 11 months release an album called "King Uncaged"? Nope. T.I., who needs to report to federal prison by Nov. 1, announced the name of his upcoming album is changing to "No Mercy," cnn.com reports. In other name news:

» The Fox drama "Ride-Along," which is filming in Chicago, has been renamed "The Chicago Code," the network announced. The show debuts in February.

» Christopher Nolan's third Batman film, scheduled to hit screens in 2012, will be called "The Dark Knight Rises," the director told the Los Angeles Times. He's not ready to reveal the villain just yet.

Love me not

Well this should make the set of "Gossip Girl" awkward. Stars and longtime lovers Penn Badgley and Blake Lively split up a few weeks ago, their rep told online.com. And in totally weird potential couples news, "America's Next Top Model" winner CariDee English tweeted to shoot down reports that she's dating rocker Marilyn Manson. The pair are musically involved, however. "As an artist in her bloom I've needed someone to look [to]," she tweeted from an account that is unverified. "Why not one of the best. My only relationship is music."

More star power

Katy Perry, Justin Bieber and Ke$ha have joined the list of performers for the American Music Awards, according to mtv.com. They join previously announced performers Christina Aguilera, Bon Jovi, Pink and Usher. The awards will be broadcast live Nov. 21 from L.A. on ABC.

$250,000-
$365,000

That's the range for the expected sale price of an original Darth Vader costume thought to be made for "The Empire Strikes Back," The Associated Press reports. The outfit and other pop culture memorabilia go on sale Nov. 25 at Christie's in London.
